identity, sexual orientation, physical or mental disabilities, faith, national or ethnic group background, family situation, relationship status, or any other condition.

Bullying or harassment in any form—be it verbal, non-verbal, physical aggression, or sexual, or emotional- is unacceptable. This encompasses all types of digital harassment or bullying.

The advisors from each school are solely responsible for the behavior of the students that they escort.

Participants should not cause damage to the premises of the school or the school's property. Any damage caused must be paid by the participants themselves or their parents if they are under 18 years of age.

Participants must follow the instructions of the Organising Team at all times.

Moreover, any damage caused to the placards or the badges is not acceptable. Those responsible will incur the cost required for their replacement.

Emergency Situations

Earthquakes

During an earthquake, everyone must stay composed. Participants should cover their head under their desks until the shaking has ceased and only then should they neatly exit the rooms. Chairs and staff ought to guide the delegates of their committee to the gathering locations and ensure that everyone has exited the room safely. The building's evacuation should take place. Participants must stay on the yard surrounding the school and await instructions from the Organising Team. Parents or guardians will be reached out to for the purpose of collecting their children.

Floods, fires or other natural disasters

During an emergency, such as a flood or fire, leaving the building is necessary and must be carried out safely following the directions and guidance of the organizing committee, at the most suitable time and with the most suitable style. Parents or guardians will be notified to collect their children.

Medical Emergencies

Due to the lack of medical support at the conference, an ambulance will be summoned in the event of a medical crisis.
